What is Potentially Negative Information?
An item is "potentially negative" when a creditor reports that you have not met the terms of your credit agreement. Negatively reported items include late payments, accounts that have been charged off, and accounts that have been sent to a collection agency. Most negative information remains on your Credit Report for seven years.

What do I do now?
If you believe that the information listed above is in anyway inaccurate, please contact the Dispute Center immediately.
